At the end of World War II, Germany, as well as its former capital of Berlin, was divided between the Allies and Russia. In the post-war period many people emigrated from the Russian side of East Germany to help rebuild the Allies' West Germany. The economy of East Germany suffered greatly from the lack of labor. In order to keep people from emigrating, as well as to protect their communist society from Western influence East Germany built a guarded brick wall in 1961 and topped it with barbed wire.

The wall was an immediate publicity catastrophe for East Germany and communism as a whole. The wall itself along with the very public punishments of those who tried to cross it showcased the tyranny of communism. Under U.S. pressure, the wall came down on November 9, 1989 and within three years, all but three communist nations had collapsed.
